IS THE GIRL WITH THE DRAGON TATTOO A SUPERHERO?
This panel will shed greater light on a topic that dominated last year’s general LGBT discussion panel at NYCC: How can comics help at-risk LGBT teens? Comics and queer teens are made for each other, but what comics have connected with young adult readers most effectively? What kinds of comics are still needed? How can libraries and outreach groups best utilize comics to reach teens? What difficulties do they face when trying to put a queer-positive comic book into the hands of someone who needs a hero? These questions and more will be discussed in an exciting panel featuring: Charles “Zan” Christiansen, founder of Prism Comics and writer of “The Power Within” Daniel Ketchum, editor of “X-Men: Legacy” and “X-Factor” Ivan Velez Jr., prolific comics writer and creator of “Tales of the Closet” Rica Takashima, avant-garde street artist and creator of “Rica ‘tte Kanji!” Jackson Martin, NYPL Associate and organizer of Anti-Prom, the largest LGBT teen event in NYC Moderator: Chris Shoemaker, New York Public Library Young Adult Programming Specialist. LEGENDARY COMICS
Digital comics and graphic novels are more available to readers than ever before and in different formats for a variety of platforms. Increasing numbers of major comics publishers are going to a “day and date structure” of publishing, which gives readers a choice of print and digital versions of newly released comics. What implications does this hold for libraries and comics readers that depend on libraries to provide them with their favorite story lines and graphic novels? David Lisa and Michael Maziekien will take a look at the history of digital comics, what’s happening now and what the future might hold for cooperation between digital comics publishers and libraries. Speaker(s): David Lisa and Michael Maziekien.

DIGITAL COMICS & LIBRARIES – PAST, PRESENT & FUTURE
It’s time to “Level Up” your Comic Con experience with a WORLD PREMIERE SCREENING of Cartoon Network’s funniest original movie for the video game age! Level Up introduces three high school gamers who unwittingly open a portal from an online game, allowing the in-game creatures and mayhem to escape into the real world! The trio must put aside their differences and join forces to play the game for real in order to save their neighborhood (and the world!) from ultimate evil! Be among the first to see Level Up before it premieres on Cartoon Network in November, with an explosive TV series to follow in 2012.

LEVEL UP WORLD PREMIERE SCREENING
As graphic novels continue to enjoy wider representation and circulation in libraries around the country, new challenges and issues face librarians. This panel will delve into those concerns as well as explore new opportunities for libraries. Topics covered will include—but certainly not be limited to—digital strategies, increasing budgets for graphic novel collections, what to do when you start running out of shelf space, promoting the collection to adult patrons and nontraditional audiences (like teachers, homeschooling parents, and others), and much more. Speaker(s): Christian Zabriskie and Karen Green, Rachael Myers and Ryan Donovan.

MARVEL: ULTIMATE COMICS UNIVERSE REBORN
What will space travel be like in 50, 100 and 200 years? If there is any lesson to be learned from past predictions of interplanetary and interstellar travel it’s that technological movement forward is rarely in the direction predicted by writers and scientists. We’ll test this hypothesis by looking at short film clips focusing on space travel, space exploration and space technology stretching back over a century. The very best guesses and extrapolations into the future had bases in physics and mathematics; a few are remarkably prescient. Finally we’ll try to guess if we can predict, with any chance of success, what our descendants will be doing away from Planet Earth in the coming centuries. Speaker(s): Michael Shara

MARVEL: WOMEN OF MARVEL
The lines are drawn – what team will you choose? With the X-Men divided, Wolverine and Cyclops head off in radically different directions with their separate teams. Is it really reasonable for anime characters to move so fast and jump so high? Are mecha efficient enough machines for future generations to build? Come join physics graduates Joe and Rukan as they take a look at how well anime adheres to the laws of physics. From the somewhat sane, to the far-fetched, to the absolutely ridiculous, anime will be scrutinized under the lens of modern science. You’ll laugh, you’ll cry, and you might even learn something, but you’ll definitely have a good time. No physics knowledge is assumed, but an understanding of basic physics may make some things easier to understand. Speaker(s): Rukan Shao and Zhao Chen.

Silver Circle will be holding it’s first ever “Work in Progress” Screening. The film is running three test screenings across the eastern seaboard before the last leg of production begins. Viewers will not be watching the finished film, but instead will have a glimpse into the world of filmmaking and process of animation. The test screenings allow viewers to submit comments and input for the directors and producers to use as guidelines for the last round of changes. Each attendee will have a comment card to fill out before they leave the screening. It’ll be a fun chance to play director! However, the director will be present for any questions the audience may have. The first 20 people in the door receive a limited edition copy of Chapter 1 of the Silver Circle comic book. Prior to the evening’s events there will be a concert at booth #1913 (6 pm) to promote the screening with one of the film’s soundtrack bands: The Last Internationale. Media and bloggers are welcome at both events! I hope everyone can attend. This is a fantastic moment to experience in filmmaking AND a great way to support Silver Circle in our independent filmmaking efforts! Visit us at SilverCircleMovie.com/Events for more details!

Natural kei is a highly underrated style here in the USA-- in fact it’s often misidentified as lolita or morigirl-- but in Japan it’s recognized as one of the biggest fashion trends of the 1980s. Many other street styles have borrowed from it but it remains in its own world, vitally untouched by the dictates of what is and isn’t considered fashionable. Come find out the history and defining characteristics of this style, learn how to wear it and where to find it, and enjoy a natural kei fashion show! Speaker(s): Amanda Barkhorn, Amelia Merrill, Aria Todd, Bianca Senisi, Jean Masterson Kelsey Hine, Martha Taylor, Miakoda Van Kuykendall and Stephanie Stoehr.

The Nerdologues is comprised of an ensemble of writers and performers that have been trained and performed at The Second City, Annoyance and iO comedy theaters in Chicago. They have been working together for over two years to create Nerd themed comedy shows with heart. The focus of their show is centered around true stories from the Nerds’ lives. The show also features comedic sketches that focus on what it is like living as a nerd. Namely, a lot of comic book and gaming humor. The show was created by Nerds for Nerds. Called “inspired” by the Chicago Tribune, they also called us “self aware, self-deprecating” and said the show “earns its title.” Well, yeah. The Nerdologues officially began in blistery winter of 2009. Intense writing and editing sessions led them to their first self produced show at Joone Studios in May of 2010 in Chicago. They sold out a 60 seat house for 5 weeks. They then decided to continue their journey and redevelop their original show and content to mount a second run aptly titled, Nerdologues: The Nerds Strike Back in July of 2010 at the Pub Theater. The show was extended an extra four weeks and finally wrapped in late August. The Nerds continued to produce more material and mounted a short run in Milwaukee in November at Comedy Sportz. The Nerds then reached back out into the community from whence they came and produced three shows at a small venue that focused on developing new work and giving other nerds an opportunity to share their stories. In the winter of 2011, they focused their efforts on a few short video sketches as well as performing in the Chicago Sketch Comedy Festival in January of 2011 and the San Francisco Sketch Comedy Festival later in the same month. The group then produced a full length show at The Second City’s Donny’s Skybox in April of 2011. They are also appearing the Milwaukee Comedy Festival in early August. A few video sketches are still in the works including a filmed Dungeons and Dragons campaign. While producing their newest full length show, they also hold a monthly story-telling event called Your Stories at the Pub Theater in Chicago. Your Stories is an event that focuses on reaching out to other Nerds in the Chicago community and letting them share their stories. They are also applying for other upcoming sketch comedy and theatre fringe festivals. The cast and crew continue to meet, write and improvise together to plan their next wave of attacks. Speaker(s): Byron Hatfield, Chris Geiger, Claire Friedman, Eric Garneau, Jeremy Kanne, Joe Gennaro, Kevin Reader, Steve Persch and William Kenkel.

Creating your product is only half the work it takes to succeed in the comics industry. What about the other half that we don’t see as clearly after the product is released to the world? This panel will explore what it is like to be on the other side of the table, as a creator. We will discuss what it takes to exhibit at conventions, promote yourself, and gain a loyal audience - from the POV of professionals already behind the table. Join creators Raina Telgemeier (Smile, The Baby-Sitters Club), Reilly Brown (Amazing Spider-Man, Power Play), David Gallaher (High Moon, Box 13), and Carolyn Belefski (Curls, The Legettes) in this conversation, moderated by Joe Carabeo. Speaker(s): Carolyn Belefski, David Gallaher, Joe Carabeo, Raina Telgemeier and Reilly Brown.

JOE SIMON: MY LIFE IN COMICS
The most important audio recording released in the nineties wasn’t a collection of songs by a self-tortured musician. In fact, it was SHUT UP LITTLE MAN!, a covert audio recording of two older drunken men living in a small flat in San Francisco, who spent their available free time yelling, screaming, hitting and generally abusing each other. The phenomenon began in 1987 when Eddie and Mitch (two young punks from the Mid-West), moved next door to Peter Haskett (a flamboyant gay man), and Raymond Huffman (a raging homophobe). This ultimate odd-couple hated each other with raging abandon, and through the paper-thin walls their alcohol-fuelled rants terrorized Eddie and Mitch. Fearing for their lives they began to tape record evidence of the insane goings on from next door. In recording Peter and Raymond’s unique dialogue, the boys accidently created one of the world’s first ‘viral’ pop-culture sensations. Their tapes went on to inspire a cult following, spawning sell-out CD’s, artwork by Dan Clowes, stage-plays, music from the likes of Devo and a Hollywood feeding frenzy. For the newly famous Eddie and Mitchell, this would be a life-changing experience that would see them ingested into the belly and fired out the orifice of the pop culture beast. Exploring the blurring boundaries between privacy, art and exploitation, SHUT UP LITTLE MAN! AN AUDIO MISADVENTURE is a darkly hilarious story that can’t be missed.

McFarlane: The Devil is in the Details
What was it like to be targeted by the Nazi party? What was Stan Lee like as a teenage kid? How did it feel to have your comics torn apart by a Congressional committee--on live television!? And what was the real origin of the Red Skull? These secrets and more, revealed by the man who lived them--Joe Simon, co-creator of Captain America, first editor at Marvel Comics, creator of Sick magazine, and a genuine living legend. Joe turned 98 years old on October 11, and this is his only appearance at a comic book convention. So come out and wish him a happy birthday! Speaker(s): Joe Simon.

SHUT UP LITTLE MAN! AN AUDIO MISADVENTURE
The U Cre-8 Comics line is an innovative approach to combining comics and the classroom. With a mix of both literary and visual arts instruction, the U Cre-8 line builds an appreciation for creative expression as well as an interest in reading. The Character Crafter Workbook has students use an application process to make their own comic creations from the ground up, much in the same characters are created in the comic book industry. Speaker(s): Victor Dandridge.

“Unicorn City” follows the life of Voss (Devin McGinn), a passionate Dungeons and Dragons gamer whose life both on and off the gaming tables constantly finds him rolling a “1”. Banished from the realm of a table-top game created by local comic book shop proprietor Shadow Hawk (Jon Gries - Napoleon Dynamite), Voss is faced with the financial pressures of living in the real world and paying bills. When a managerial job offer with a big gaming company hinges on his proven ability to lead, Voss calls upon his fellow gamers to shed the shackles of Shadow Hawk’s tyranny and live out their fantasies in a utopia dubbed “Unicorn City.” Telling only fellow gamer Marsha (Jaclyn Hales) that Unicorn City’s existence is solely for potential employment opportunity, he convinces the remainder of his followers to live as their characters would. Conflict presents itself in the form of battles with his brother Clancy over a pvc-pipe swore, the Holy Avenger, over-aggressive local police officers, Marsha’s romantic crush that goes sadly unnoticed by Voss, and Shadow Hawk, who attempts to take over Unicorn City. Will Voss be able to conquer the demons plaguing him both within and outside Unicorn City’s borders? Or will his selfishness finally catch up with him, leaving him in worse shape than ever?

This panel is a testament to the diversity and specialization of the manga market in Japan. Thanks to the popularity of manga in the United States, many of the titles I cover are now available in English. As someone who dislikes superhero comics, I’m amazed at the scope and the breadth of manga titles available. My PowerPoint presentation is broken down into broad categories - “Regular Sports” (manga about track and field) “Unusual Sports” (Hikaru No Go, golf titles), “Quasi-Sports” (fishing manga, yo-yo manga), “Manga for Girls” (ballet manga, pet manga), “Manly Manga” (Pachinko Manga, Mah-Jong Manga), “Food Manga” (Yakitate Japan, Bambino) and the “Uncategorizable” (manga about tasting junk food, manga about Jesus and Buddha living as roommates). Speaker(s): Erin Finnegan and Noah Fulmor.

Show creators Jackson Publick and Doc Hammer, perennial Comic-Con favorites, will discuss their original series and answer questions that have been submitted by fans on AdultSwimPresents.com/NYCC. Speaker(s): Doc Hammer and Jackson Publick.

The art of wand dueling is a centuries old practice that has unfortunately fallen on the wayside in today’s modern wizarding curriculum. Join The Group That Shall Not Be Named, Harry Potter NYC as their top wand dueling instructor demonstrates several of the offensive and defensive positions most frequently employed in duels. Many of these can be seen being used in the now famous Harry Potter Documentary films.

Translation for Muggles: Dueling in the Harry Potter films was a carefully choreographed form of theatrical combat. HP-NYC will demonstrate and instruct participants in several of the dueling moves that the actors used. Bring your own wand if you prefer, if not, training wands will be provided.

Speaker(s): Cassandra Johnstone, Christine Evans, Clay Dockery and Jonathon Rosenthal.

WAND DUELING
In February 2011, the closing of New York City’s last arcade, Chinatown Fair, marked the end of an era. Not a single coin-operated arcade was left in Manhattan, yet a community of dedicated gamers with no where to go remained. Are arcades a relic from the past? The question was answered with the opening of Next Level, an arcade for gamers by gamers, in Brooklyn. What is the role of arcades now that gaming has shifted to the home console and online play? Panelists Seth Killian (Street Fighter legend, Capcom PR), Henry Cen (co-founder of Next Level arcade), Norman Burgess (longtime Chinatown Fair regular), Jamin Warren (journalist and co-founder of Kill Screen Magazine), and Kurt Vincent (director of the upcoming documentary ARCADE) will discuss the subject, and hold a Q&A. After which a trailer for ARCADE will be premiered.

Speaker(s): Henry Cen and Jamin Warren, Kurt Vincent, Norman Burgess and Seth Killian.
2011 Programming Schedule

Meet Me At The Arcade
Beware the women of Sci-Fi/Fantasy...and their kick-ass heroines. Danger just might be these girls’ middle names. But no amount of bad guys can keep these ladies from doing what’s right. Whether standing up for friends and family, or just plain kicking some ass, these girls don’t shy away from a fight. Femmes Fatales on the panel include: Patricia Briggs; Alison Goodman, Kim Harrison; Jeaniene Frost; Marjorie M. Liu, Sabrina Benulis and Kristen Painter. Speaker(s): Alison Goodman, Jeaniene Frost, Kim Harrison, Kristen Painter, Marjorie M. Liu, Patricia Briggs and Sabrina Benulis.

We’re No Angels: Leading Ladies Of SF/F
Long a staple of the SF/F genre, epic fantasy is poised to take a coup over the bestseller lists, thanks in part to HBO’s fantastically popular series based upon George R.R. Martin’s “Game of Thrones” novel. This summer saw signing lines hundreds of readers deep (luckily none with swords in hand) for #1 New York Times bestselling author Patrick Rothfuss’ American appearance. Now, in a special spotlight session exclusive to New York Comic Con, we pair internationally bestselling author Brandon Sanderson, Peter Brett, Phillipa Ballantine and epic fantasy debut authors Rae Carson, David Chandler and Nils Johnson-Shelton talk about why swords and sorcerers, king-makers and kingslayers; dragons and high drama have renewed resonance in fiction. Speaker(s): Brandon Sanderson, David Chandler, Nils Johnson-Shelton, Peter Brett, Philippa Ballantine and Rae Carson.

BLACK DYNAMITE
In this, the tenth anniversary year of Neil Gaiman’s AMERICAN GODS, the ultimate urban fantasy road trip, we’ve seen a rash of infernal plagues infect some of America’s greatest cities. Witchcraft and demonic activity infect Kim Harrison’s Cincinnati, while Patricia Briggs’ novels wreak havoc on the shapeshifter, vampire and demonic tribes of the Tri Cities region of Washington State. Anton Strout and Edward Lazellari see New York as the ultimate urban fantasy battleground. Rachel Caine has created an apocalyptic outpost in the Lone Star State vampire-controlled city of Morganville, terror has taken a bite out of Christina Henry’s Chicagoland, and Duane Swierczynski’s newest novels take us straight to Hell. These authors will argue that there truly is a continental divide between the forces of East and West; North and South; Good and Evil. Grab a bag of Cheetos, a six pack of Red Bull, and some holy water and join us as we explore the road to perdition... Speaker(s): Anton Strout, Christina Henry, Edward Lazellari, Kim Harrison, Patricia Briggs and Rachel Caine.

A library by definition, are collections of media. Librarians have terrific resources on building and maintaining material collections in various media such as books, movies, and music, however, there is a severe lack of information on how to build and maintain video game collections. This session will give attendees a solid foundation for starting and maintaining a video game collection, with a specific focus on collection development tools and budgeting. Issues raised include how to judge game content, the inclusion of older games in loanable collections, the educational and recreational value of game collections, the important role game collections will play in the future of libraries, how schools and libraries can work together using gaming as a media tool, and sustaining the quality and relevance of game collections.

Video Game Collection Development for Libraries

From sneakers to Hollywood blockbusters to the cover of Library Journal, the intellectual properties for gaming and comic companies are highly recognizable and can help us connect our materials collections to users and increase attendance numbers for programming. Join us as we share successful practices for marketing existing programs and collections, give bibliographies to build and increase recognizability in materials collections, and tie our programs and collections together to add value to our users’ experience.

METHODS AND MATERIALS: SCULPTING WITH THE MATTEL DESIGN TEAM
Fiction authors discuss the not-quite-living-but-most-certainly-not-dead characters that inhabit the pages of their novels and their complicated, pulse-challenged relationships. From dangerous supernatural investigations to zombie invasions, where do love and kindness fit into the scheme of these post-apocalyptic tales? The concept of good vs. evil comes in to play with an undead, supernatural twist. In Lia Habel’s novel, a proper young Victorian lady finds true love in the arms of a dashing zombie while Bob Fingerman explores human compassion after a zombie pandemic sweeps the land. Stefan Petrucha’s protagonist is wrongly convicted of his wife’s murder, but is brought back to life after his execution ready to make things right. The hero of Thomas E. Sniegoski’s series must fight evil forces while mourning the loss of his wife, while Nancy Holzner’s heroine must deal with a teenage zombie sidekick, a vampire roommate, and werewolf boyfriend. Tahereh Mafi’s heroine can kill with a single touch (which wreaks havoc on all attempts at intimacy). In an apocalyptic world strewn with cannibals and wolves, Veronica Rossi’s dystopian heroine learns to find love with someone from far beyond her realm of experience. These authors will argue that despite the presence of mortally-challenged characters in these novels, the stories speak more to life and humanity than death. Speaker(s): Bob Fingerman, Drew Magary, Lia Habel, Nancy Holzner, Stefan Petrucha, Tahereh Mafi, Thomas E. Sniegoski and Veronica Rossi.

ZOMBIES, FALLEN ANGELS, AND OTHER PARANORMALS GIVE NEW MEANING TO MILITARY
SF/F authors have kept readers at the edge of their seats by incorporating wartime experience and strategies of armed conflict into the far-future and alternate history worlds they create. Not since Luke Skywalker blasted the hell out of the Death Star have we seen such interest in war-inspired science fiction and fantasy. Perhaps a sign of the time we’re in (and whatever might be said, we all bow before Scalzi’s influence) people just want books about good guys defeating unfriendly space invaders and plausible visions of a future military. May the force be with everyone in the audience as Taylor Anderson, Jack Campbell, and Myke Cole, fire up their ammo and discuss this Semper Fi friendly subgenre of popular fiction. Speaker(s): Jack Campbell, Myke Cole and Taylor Anderson.

ACCELERATE TO ATTACK SPEED: MILITARY SCIENCE FICTION
After years of waiting, hoping, speculating and reporting obstacles, the two-part film adaptation of “The Hobbit” is finally moving forward. For more than a decade TheOneRing.net has brought fans world-wide the latest happenings on the world of J.R.R. Tolkien in books, live events and film. Now the site takes a long look at all the is happening, and will happen, in New Zealand before the films hit theaters in 2012 and 2013. Peter Jackson, a long-time friend to TORn, is back in the director’s chair and TORn’s reporters have been working overtime to find out the latest. Expect to be informed, surprised and let your voice be heard on rumors and developments during this one hour panel. Speaker(s): Chris Pirrotta, Kirsten Cairns, Larry Curtis, Lisa Crouch and Rebecca Perry.

Like their creators Will Eisner and Bob Kane, The Spirit and The Batman had an intertwined and complex relationship. DeWitt Clinton High School classmates, Will and Bob helped each other in their early comics careers. As fate would have it, each came up with an iconic non-superpowered costumed adventurer who owed a lot to the films noir of Orson Welles and other cinema pioneers. Investigating how these two masters interacted, interrelated, and worked is sure to be fascinating. Join Michael Uslan (producer of the Batman films), Paul Levitz (Legion of Super-Heroes), Dennis O’Neil (Batman writer and editor), Chris Couch (The Will Eisner Companion), and moderator Danny Fingeroth (The Stan Lee Universe) as they explore the similarities and differences between the characters and their creators. Speaker(s): Chris Couch, Danny Fingeroth, Dennis O’Neil, Michael Uslan and Paul Levitz.

Breaking into the comic book business as an artist can be an exciting but challenging process. It takes talent, proper training, a ton of practice, patience and a strong portfolio. For the past 35 years The Kubert School has offered students a high quality and challenging education in Cartoon and Graphic Art stressing an importance on all of these qualities. During the convention, drop off photocopied samples of your work at The Kubert School booth leading up to the panel. If selected your name will be posted and a time will be scheduled for you to meet with a Kubert School representative. Come and learn what makes a strong portfolio and what is needed in today’s age of comics!

THE KUBERT SCHOOL PORTFOLIO REVIEWS

Comic book historian Arlen Schumer (The Silver Age of Comic Book Art) and Randolph Hoppe (Director of the online Jack Kirby Museum) present their theory that, just like a film’s director, not its screenwriter, is considered its true author (auteur in French), so should a comic book artist be considered the auteur of any comic book work done in collaboration with a writer (or a script in any verbal form), and is therefore a de facto co-creator and co-author, with the credited writer, of that work. Joining them on the panel discussion that follows will be Michael Bonsteel (School the Art Institute of Chicago), editor/publisher John Morrow (TwoMorrows Publications), publisher J. David Spurlock (Vanguard Publishing), and other comic book industry luminaries to be announced. Speaker(s): Arlen Schumer, J. David Spurlock, John Morrow, Michael Bonsteel and Randolph Hoppe.

Brad Ricca (Case Western Reserve University) analyzes the historical inspirations for the Fantastic Four—including the Baxter Building, the Mole Man, and the Yancy Street Gang—in the New York area, including a group of four heroes who emerged from a sealed ship in the middle of the Atlantic and the sad story of a physicist who painted a strange symbol on his chest and inexplicably went on a rampage. Rich Shivener (Northern Kentucky University) draws on the work of Susan Sontag to analyze the campiness the Joker in comics and films. Hannah Means-Shannon (Georgian Court University) investigates the relationship between the world of the conscious ego and the unconscious psyche between in the Western strong man motif as represented in the mythology of Herakles and Alan Moore’s Tom Strong series. Speaker(s): Brad Ricca, Hannah Means-Shannon and Rich Shivener.

COMICS STUDIES CONFERENCE 3: REQUIEM FOR WEISINGER: THE LIFE AND WORK OF SUPERMAN EDITOR MORT WEISINGER

They’re rich, smart, strong, and they have the most wonderful toys. They’re leaders among superheroes even though they have no superpowers and they intimidate other heroes. Batman and Iron Man belong to that very small group of superheroes who have a veneer of reality. Both superheroes are defined by their human frailty combined with extreme training and use of technological enhancements. Comics legend Dennis O’Neil (Batman, Iron Man) and kinesiologist E. Paul Zehr (Becoming Batman, Inventing Iron Man) join psychologists Travis Langley (Batman in His Belfry), Andrea Letamendi (UCLA), and Robin Rosenberg (The Psychology of Superheroes) plus retired NYPD sergeant Mike Bruen in examining what it takes both physically and mentally to create a superhero without benefit of cosmic rays, magic rings, mutant genes, or otherworldly origins. Speaker(s): Andrea Letamendi, Dennis O’Neil, E. Paul Zehr, Robin Rosenberg and Travis Langley.

COMICS STUDIES CONFERENCE 4: BATMAN VS. IRON MAN: CAN A PERSON TRULY BECOME EITHER?

Neil Cohn (Tufts University) discusses several psychology experiments measuring reaction time and brainwaves that contribute to our understanding of what goes on in the brain when a person reads a comic and reveals that the understanding of comics involves a complex negotiation between a hierarchic system of narrative and the construction of meaning. CJ Suzuki (Lehigh University) focuses on the ways female Japanese comics creators (mangaka) employ shojo manga to critique, contest, and/or negotiate the hegemonic narratives and ideologies of the nation, gender/sexual normativity, and patriarchal social structure. Jeff Barbanell (Arizona State University) traces and deconstructs the transformation of Native American stereotypes and tropes in the comics medium to demonstrate how to work with elementary and secondary Native American literacy students, using the sequential visual medium of comics. Speaker(s): CJ Suzuki, Jeff Barbanell and Neil Cohn.
Comics Studies Conference 6: Understanding Comics and The Self

Pablo Rodríguez Balbontin (University of Iowa) analyzes how Juan “Jan” López Los cabecicubos (The Cubeheads) works as a satire of the Spanish “Transition” to democracy and its strategy of oblivion and the connection with the contemporary recovery of historical memory that is central to political debate in Spain today. Brittany Tullis (University of Iowa) compares an early Bruguera comic, La Rue del Percebe, with Paco Roca’s award-winning graphic novel Arrugas to illustrate the continuity of social realism in Spanish comics. Tania Perez-Cano (University of Iowa) uses Max’s Gustavo to trace the contribution of the underground comic in Spain to ongoing antinuclear and ecological discourse. Speaker(s): Brittany Tullis, Pablo Rodríguez Balbontin and Tania Perez-Cano.
